SOLVENT EXTRACTION

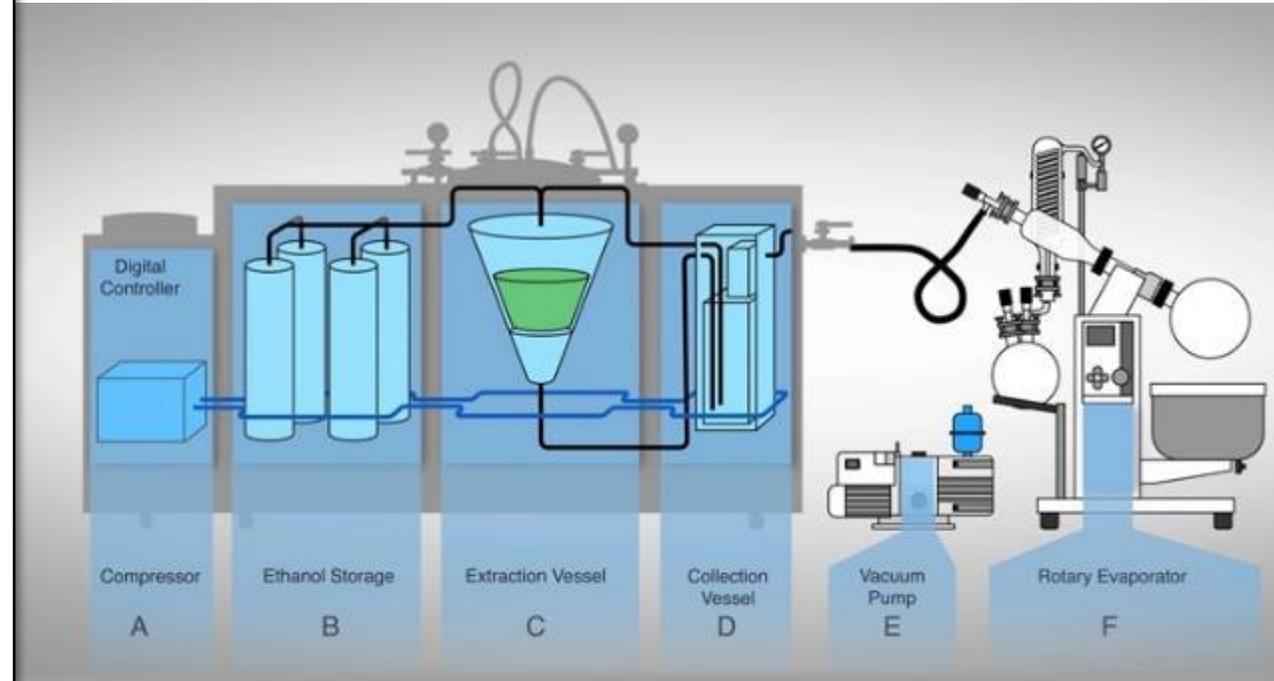

Uses chemical solvents, such as propane, butane, CO₂, or ethanol to strip cannabinoids and terpenes from the flower.

PROs

- Most solvents are readily available
- Fast processing time
- Solvents usually target all trichomes

CONs

- High initial cost of equipment
- Volatile gases can be dangerous
- Machine operators need extra safety training
- System requires extensive purging in the post-extraction phase
- Poor processing can lead to traces of solvent in final product
- Perceived as less healthy than solventless concentrates

SOLVENTLESS EXTRACTION

Relies on heat, pressure, and water to extract terpenes.

PROs

- No chemicals required
- "Solvent-Free" is a value prop
- Less complicated waste disposal requirements
- Solventless products contain fewer impurities
- No purging needed
- Better for the environment
- More cost-effective for small businesses

CONs

- More challenging to produce in mass quantities than solvent extraction
- Slower than solvent extraction
